EXTENDED SYNTHETIC HOME INSURANCE POLICY

TRAINING DATA ONLY — FICTIONAL INSURER AND FICTIONAL POLICY TERMS. NOT VALID FOR REAL INSURANCE DECISIONS.

Policy ID: SYN-HOME-EXT-2026-001 | Version: 1.0 | Effective date: 1 January 2026

Product: Example Home Protection Plus | Territory: Fictional

This document is intentionally longer and includes repeated policy structures, multiple tables, exclusions, claim procedures, definitions, scenarios and test questions. It is designed to test PDF parsing, chunking, retrieval, page citations and table handling.

1. Purpose, scope and definitions

This synthetic policy describes fictional cover for a home and certain household contents. It exists only for RAG development and must not be used to make real insurance or legal decisions.

The policyholder is the fictional person named in a policy schedule. The insured address is the home address listed in that schedule. A claim is a request for payment or assistance after an event that may be covered.

An insured event is an event described in the coverage section and not removed by an exclusion, condition, deductible or limit. A deductible is the amount the policyholder pays toward an otherwise eligible claim. A coverage limit is the maximum amount payable for the relevant benefit.

Reasonable evidence may include photographs, repair estimates, invoices, proof of ownership, dates, a description of the event, and reports from relevant authorities where appropriate.

2. General conditions

Coverage applies only when the facts of the event satisfy the relevant coverage wording and all applicable conditions. Listing a type of event in the coverage section does not guarantee payment for every claim involving that event.

The policyholder should take reasonable steps to prevent further damage after an incident, where safe to do so. Emergency actions should not expose a person to danger. Keep receipts for reasonable emergency expenses and provide them with the claim.

The insurer may request additional information that is reasonably related to assessing the event, cause, amount of loss, ownership or applicable policy condition. The policyholder should respond accurately and preserve relevant documents.

If the policy schedule and a general condition appear inconsistent, this synthetic document does not define a priority rule. A real policy would need to be checked for its actual hierarchy and endorsements.

Any examples, amounts, time periods, rates, limits and deductibles in this document are invented solely for software testing.

3. Covered events

Fire damage: sudden accidental fire damage to insured buildings or contents may be considered up to the limit in the coverage table. Evidence should describe the cause and extent of damage. Intentional acts and excluded events remain outside cover.

Escape of water: sudden escape of water from internal fixed plumbing may be considered when the event is accidental. Gradual seepage, long-term humidity, corrosion and lack of maintenance are excluded under this sample.

Theft: theft of insured contents may be considered when there are visible signs of forced entry. A police report, proof of ownership and a list of missing items should be supplied where available.

Glass breakage: accidental breakage of fixed household glass may be considered. Scratches, gradual deterioration and cosmetic marks that do not constitute breakage are not covered by this sample.

Electrical surge: sudden accidental electrical surge damage to eligible household electronics may be considered up to the specific sub-limit in the table, provided the cause and damaged items can be reasonably evidenced.

Temporary accommodation: reasonable temporary accommodation expenses may be considered only when a covered event makes the insured home unsafe to occupy and prior approval is obtained where practicable. This benefit has a separate limit and does not apply to planned renovation.

4. Coverage limits and deductibles

The table below gives fictional limits. A limit is not a promise that the full amount will be paid; the cause, evidence, exclusions, depreciation and deductible still apply.

Benefit	Maximum limit	Deductible	Special conditions
Fire damage	€50,000	€250	Sudden accidental fire; evidence of cause and loss
Escape of water	€10,000	€500	Sudden leak from internal plumbing; gradual seepage excluded
Theft	€5,000	€300	Visible signs of forced entry; proof of ownership
Glass breakage	€1,500	€100	Fixed household glass; accidental breakage
Electrical surge	€2,000	€200	Eligible electronics; evidence of surge and damage
Temporary accommodation	€3,000	€0	Home unsafe after covered event; approval where practicable

5. Exclusions

Intentional damage: loss intentionally caused by the policyholder or a person acting with their consent is excluded.

War and nuclear events: loss directly caused by war, invasion, armed conflict, nuclear reaction or radioactive contamination is excluded in this synthetic policy.

Wear and tear: gradual deterioration, rust, corrosion, mould caused by ongoing moisture, lack of maintenance, defective construction and gradual seepage are excluded.

Unoccupied property: theft or water damage occurring after the property has been unoccupied for more than 60 consecutive days is excluded unless the policy schedule contains an explicit written exception.

Business property: stock, equipment or goods used mainly for a business are not covered unless specifically listed in the schedule.

Cyber events: loss caused solely by malicious software, data theft or online fraud is not covered under the home property benefits described here.

Cosmetic damage: scratches, dents or marks that do not impair the function of the insured item are excluded unless a specific benefit says otherwise.

Excluded cause takes precedence over a general description of a covered event when the facts establish that the exclusion applies. For example, a water stain caused by long-term seepage is excluded even though sudden escape of water can be a covered event.

6. Claim notification and evidence

The policyholder should notify the fictional insurer as soon as reasonably possible after discovering a potential claim. This synthetic policy does not specify a fixed number of days for notification.

Provide the policy reference, date and approximate time of the event, insured address, description of what happened, and contact information for follow-up.

For fire claims, provide photographs where safe, a description of the event, an inventory of damaged items and repair estimates. An authority report may be relevant depending on the circumstances.

For water claims, provide photographs of the affected area, the apparent source of water, plumber findings where available, invoices and details of actions taken to prevent further damage.

For theft claims, provide a list of stolen items, proof of ownership where available, evidence of forced entry and a police report or report reference where available.

For glass claims, identify the fixed glass item, explain how it broke, and provide a repair or replacement estimate.

For electrical surge claims, list affected devices, provide purchase records if available, repair findings and any relevant evidence about the surge event.

Missing information may delay assessment while the insurer requests relevant evidence. This synthetic policy does not say that any single missing document automatically causes denial.

7. Depreciation and settlement

For eligible electronic equipment older than two years, the settlement amount is reduced by 5% of the original purchase price for each completed year of age after the second year, up to a maximum reduction of 40%.

The depreciation rule applies only to eligible electronic equipment. It does not override coverage limits, deductibles, exclusions or other conditions.

Example A: eligible equipment purchased for €1,000 and aged five completed years has three years beyond the first two years. The illustrative depreciation is 15%, or €150, before applying a deductible and limit.

Example B: eligible equipment purchased for €800 and aged twelve completed years would have a calculated reduction above the cap, so the maximum reduction of 40% applies. The amount before deductible and limit would be €480.

Example C: eligible equipment aged exactly two completed years has no depreciation under this sample rule because the reduction begins after the second year.

Depreciation is not applied by this synthetic rule to building repairs, ordinary furniture or glass breakage. Other actual policies may define settlement differently; this sample is not a real contract.

8. Responsibilities after an event

Take reasonable and safe steps to prevent further damage. Do not put yourself at risk to protect property or collect evidence.

Keep damaged items where safe and practical until they have been documented or inspected. If urgent repairs are needed to prevent further loss, keep photographs and receipts.

Do not discard receipts, invoices, estimates or other documents that support the amount claimed. Keep a copy of communications and the claim reference.

Provide accurate information and correct any material mistake as soon as it is noticed. Deliberate misrepresentation is excluded from benefits under this fictional policy.

Where multiple events contribute to a loss, describe each event separately and provide available dates and evidence. The policy does not automatically treat separate incidents as one event.

9. Special scenarios and interpretations

Scenario: a pipe suddenly bursts and damages a kitchen cabinet. The escape-of-water benefit may be relevant, subject to the €10,000 limit, €500 deductible, evidence and all exclusions.

Scenario: a wall has slowly developed damp patches over many months. Gradual seepage and long-term humidity are excluded; the sudden escape-of-water benefit should not be assumed to cover this loss.

Scenario: a laptop is stolen after a window is visibly forced open. The theft benefit may be relevant if the laptop is insured contents and evidence, ownership and other conditions are satisfied.

Scenario: an item disappears but there are no visible signs of forced entry. The stated theft condition has not been demonstrated from the available facts; the system should not confidently say that the claim is covered.

Scenario: a television bought for €1,000 is five completed years old and is damaged by an eligible electrical surge. The 15% depreciation example may apply if all eligibility conditions are met, but the €2,000 electrical surge limit and €200 deductible also apply.

Scenario: glass is scratched but not broken. The glass-breakage benefit describes accidental breakage, while cosmetic scratches are excluded.

Scenario: the home is unsafe after a covered fire. Temporary accommodation expenses may be considered up to €3,000 with the stated conditions, including approval where practicable.

Scenario: a claim is reported several weeks after discovery. This sample says to notify as soon as reasonably possible but specifies no fixed deadline in days. The system must not invent a 7-day or 30-day rule.

10. Document and table interpretation rules

Coverage questions should be answered using both the relevant benefit description and the exclusions. Retrieving only the coverage table can lead to an incomplete answer.

Amounts in the coverage table are maximum limits, not guaranteed payments. A deductible is applied to an otherwise eligible claim as stated in the applicable terms.

Where a table row contains a special condition, the condition must remain associated with the corresponding benefit. Do not combine the deductible for one benefit with the limit for another.

If the question asks for a field not present in the document, state that it is not specified. Do not infer an exact notification deadline, waiting period or legal obligation.

Where the question lacks necessary facts, explain what additional facts would be needed rather than giving a definitive coverage decision.

11. Quick reference table

The quick reference table repeats selected terms to test whether retrieval returns the correct row rather than mixing information from multiple rows.

Question topic	Limit	Deductible	Key condition
Fire	€50,000	€250	Sudden accidental fire
Water	€10,000	€500	Sudden internal plumbing leak
Theft	€5,000	€300	Visible forced entry
Glass	€1,500	€100	Fixed glass, accidental breakage
Electrical surge	€2,000	€200	Eligible electronics
Temporary accommodation	€3,000	€0	Home unsafe after covered event

12. RAG evaluation questions

• What is the maximum limit and deductible for escape-of-water damage?

• Is gradual seepage covered? Quote the exclusion.

• What evidence is requested for a theft claim?

• What is the depreciation rate and maximum reduction for eligible electronics?

• Does the policy specify a fixed deadline in days for notifying a claim?

• What is the deductible for electrical surge damage?

• Are scratches to fixed household glass covered?

• What happens if a home is unoccupied for more than 60 consecutive days?

• What are the conditions for temporary accommodation expenses?

• Does a €50,000 fire limit mean the full amount will always be paid?

• What information should be supplied for a water damage claim?

• If there are no visible signs of forced entry, can theft coverage be confirmed?

END OF SYNTHETIC TRAINING DOCUMENT

All policy language, scenarios, amounts, percentages, and conditions are fictional and provided only to test software. Do not rely on this document for insurance, financial, or legal decisions.